

The street railway officials estimate that the Fort William street cars carried on Saturday, the day of the holiday for the reception of the 52nd battalion close to 30,000 people, including all the cars that carried soldiers and veterans free of charge. The paid fares that day totalled in cash $601.55, and the number of persons traveling outside of those who were carried free, was 12,333.

Three district officers