

234107 Corporal L. A. Hurrell, College street, Port Arthur, is one of the local men who arrived in Halifax yesterday morning on the Baltic: He enlisted in Winnipeg with the 203rd "hard and dry" battalion, and has been overseas for three years. Corporal Hurrell will be here in a few days.

850556 Private John H. Cook, son of Mrs. Barnes, 218 Banning street, Port Arthur, was expected to arrive this morning from overseas, but he didn't come, though he will be home in a few days. He has with him a Scotch bride and young child. He enlisted in St. Catherines with the 21st battalion, and has been overseas for three years. He was wounded in the arm in August, 1918, and has lately been at Witley camp and also at Seaford. Private Cook used to be chef at the Olympia cafe, Port Arthur, and from there he went to work in a similar capacity at the Commercial hotel, Hamilton, later moving to St. Catherines, where he enlisted.

Sergeant George Hall, who left here with the first draft of the 52nd battalion, has arrived in Canada and will reach Fort William on Friday night. He is a brother of Mrs. E. D. Jones and Mrs. T. Raby, of this city.
