Home from France, after taking a trip into Germany at the expense of the government, Private F. A. P. Stacpoole arrived in Fort William yesterday morning and is staying over for the day with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Lumby. "Paddy" Stacpoole, as he was known in Fort William some ten years ago, still has many friends in this city with whom he has been renewing acquaintance. He left Arizona, where he was engaged on engineering work, and came to Victoria to enlist, being attached to the seventh battalion, and will leave tonight for the west, expecting to return to his work in Arizona within the next month or so. Among the souvenirs that he brought back is one of the Hun propaganda leaflets, which shows, with absolute assurance and efficiency, the certain ruin that the sub campaign was destined to bring upon England.
