Gunner F. R. Eberts, of the 23rd battery, Canadian field artillery, is expected to arrive home tonight on the Canadian Pacific railway train from Toronto. Gunner Eberts has been overseas for over a year and was engaged with his battery in all the big battles in which the Canadian corps participated last summer and fall, up to the signing of the armistice. He is a brother of J. B. Eberts, sports editor for the Times-Journal, who recently returned to his civilian job, after service overseas as a lieutenant with the royal flying corps. Gunner Eberts was with the office force of the G.T.P. elevator before he enlisted.
